

What Can I Do With A Major in Religion ?

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

Career choices open to students who have majored in Religion are substantially the same as those open to students with other liberal arts majors such as Anthropology, English, History, or Philosophy.

Alycia Valente,
Class of 2008
Attending Robert Wood
Johnson Medical School; will graduate in 2011.

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

Increasing globalization and racial and ethnic diversity are opening up new opportunities for Religion majors in governmental and non-governmental organizations, public health, federal and state law enforcement, and in a variety of businesses such as consulting, public relations, mediation and conflict resolution and opinion polling, just to name a few.

Alan Wright, Class of 2003
Double Major: Religion & Philosophy.
Worked for non-profit community organization since graduation.
Currently attending Rutgers Law School in Newark and expects to graduate in 2010.

DOUBLE MAJOR

Divided and double majors opens up even more interesting possibilities. For example, a student interested in community service might divide his/her major between religion and sociology or religion and anthropology. Someone who is interested in teaching might double major in Religion and Education.

Philip Blanc,
Class of 2002
Double Major: Religion
& Biological Sciences

Shreya Patel, Class of 2004
Double Major: Religion &
Finance
